

Abstract of the Invention

A process for forming reinforced cartons in which one or more reinforcing strips are laminated to a carton material along a processing line or path. As the reinforcing strips and carton material are fed along the processing path, cold set and hot melt adhesive materials are applied to resist de-lamination of the reinforcing strips and carton material during downstream cutting operations.